Spaceflight in the Era of Aero-Space Planes Russell J. Hannigan
This is the first book of its type that deals with the subject of future aero-space plane launchers from the integrated perspective of the political, technical, and economic issues that drive their development. Discussion also focuses on how such launchers could directly impact the U.S. and other nations' space programs. Many interviews were conducted, particularly with the originators and directors of the current major programs. The NASP, Sanger, HOTOL and Delta Clipper (SSRT) projects are analyzed in detail as specific case studies to illustrate the myriad problems associated with getting any reusable launcher off the ground. Interviews with congressmen and foreign politicians are also included. It is not necessary to be an expert in the technical aspects of aero-space planes to understand the issues in this book.
